Chapter 1 by Maya Shields

I'm just a normal kid. I have friends, parents that love me, and I am even getting good grades. Well, that's what I would've said when I was only ten years old. Now these days everyone hates me, my parents think I'm insane, and I am nearly failing in my classes. But I don't care. Who needs friends anyways? Well I'm gonna start the story now so you don't die of hearing me rant on about life.

My alarm clock went off at seven in the morning.

"Ugh! I don't wanna go!" I groaned as I fell out of bed onto the floor.

"You have to go! It's school, you go everyday! Stop making a fuss of it" my mom yelled. I quickly stood up and reached out for my closet door.

"What should I wear today?" I thought. I reached for the first pair of jeans I could see. They had a lot of holes in them, but it was on purpose. I put on a black band shirt. The hardest part of getting ready for school though was always my hair and makeup. It does take a while to put on black everything and straighten my hair in only an hour. once that was all done, I grabbed my stuff and went to school.
